

'Being Frank' is a children's picture book that is designed to enhance the understanding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Servicemen and women's roles in our defence force. 'Uncle Harry Allie' is portrayed by the main character, Frank, who is an Indigenous War Veteran who worked in the Australian Air Force as a high ranking officer. Allie's life story is inspiring and reminds us of how Aboriginal people fought for our freedom, and also how they were treated. The reason that it was aimed at children, specifically Stage 3 students, is that they should be aware of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Servicemen and women and this children's book would be a perfect resource to assist teachers to educate younger children in an engaging manner.
